BRISTOL CHESS CLUB HOSTS EXCITING FINAL ROUND

On Saturday, 23rd August 1924, the Bristol Chess Club held the final round of their annual tournament, with local player Michael Brown facing off against his opponent, Russell Walters. The match, which started at 1 pm, drew a large crowd of spectators.

The match began with Brown taking an early lead, with Walters struggling to catch up in the first few rounds. However, as the match progressed, Walters began to gain momentum and made a strong comeback. The two players were evenly matched, and the game was filled with tension as they made their moves. The match lasted over 4 hours, showing the dedication and focus of the players.

In the end, it was Brown who was victorious, winning the tournament and taking home the first-place prize. Walters put up a good fight and the audience was impressed by the level of competition.

Harry Williamson, last year's champion, may have been disappointed not to make it to the final round, but he had nothing but praise for the players. "Both Russell and Michael played incredibly well, it was a pleasure to watch such a high-level match. I am looking forward to seeing them both in future tournaments," said Williamson.

The Bristol Chess Club would like to thank the players for a great tournament and the audience for their support. They are looking forward to hosting more exciting chess matches in the future.
